ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A luggage protective guard is formed of a tubular body and is fastened to a luggage corner such that the tubular body is fastened with a frame corner of the luggage. The tubular body is provided with a protective wing serving to shield an exterior of the luggage corner. The protective wing is slantingly extended from the tubular body in such a manner that the protective wing and a center line of the tubular body form an angle.